Administrative Procedures Act

The Administrative Procedure Act (APA) establishes certain requirements which affect the adoption of standards, code sets and operating rules.

Federal agencies must:

- publish a notice of proposed rulemaking,
- provide the public an opportunity to comment on the proposal, and
- publish a final rule with a statement of the rule's purpose and basis.

There are exceptions, including the opportunity to publish Interim Final Rule with comment, good cause exceptions, direct final rule making and consolidated public comments.
